

INTERMED XP prepares to close out the Year 2012 with a sense of satisfaction and as always, gratitude.

Our readers can count on us in the Year 2013 to continue certain popular practices of this modest newsletter. Foremost of these is to brief them on new and continuing products useful for those in the equine, camel and large animal industries as well as for folks involved in the pet industries. That will include, of course, reviews of the most effective products available on the current market. Information will continue to be transmitted about any recognition received by a product as well as good or poor reception by its customers and users.

No one should be surprised to continue to read here some tips on how to care for their animals: horses, camels, dogs, cats, birds and other pets. Trust INTERMED XP also to relay news about any recent or proposed regulations which can help expand our customers' business or render it more competitive.

Occasionally, one can expect a reflection on a subject that extends beyond animal health and care. Our general well-being and that of our world influence everyone's business and INTERMED XP will share its perspective in the hope it might add a positive element for your consideration.

COMPETITIVE DOGS

So, as we approach its starting line, we wish one and all a Happy New Year 2013!

May you have a winning season with success at home, on the farm, in the stables and on the tracks with abundant good health for all our two legged and four legged friends!

The Editor